Message From Our CEO

October 2025

Dear Team,

As we enter the final stretch of 2025, our industry finds itself at another pivotal moment. The automotive landscape is shifting once again, this time not from disruption alone, but from recalibration. Policy shifts under the new U.S. administration, changing trade conditions, and renewed tariff structures have reintroduced uncertainty across supply chains and investment decisions. While this environment presents real challenges, it also reminds us of the importance of adaptability, a strength that continues to define PTI.

The rapid EV push of the past few years is now moderating. Since the change in administration, investor enthusiasm and OEM capital allocation have become more cautious. Many automakers are reassessing timelines, geographic footprint and product strategies, leading to what appears to be a more gradual and balanced evolution between internal combustion, hybrid, and electric platforms. While it is clear that EVs are not going away, it is equally evident that the pace and pathway of this transition are still being written. For suppliers like PTI, this means opportunity, but also the need for discipline and strategic flexibility.

Despite these broader headwinds, PTI continues to perform with strength and resilience. Our operations in both the U.S. and Mexico have maintained exceptional service and quality levels amid supply chain interruptions and market volatility. This is a direct reflection of the commitment and professionalism of our teams. In an environment where others are slowing investment, our ability to execute, control costs, and deliver for our customers has earned continued trust from partners like GM, Ford, Stellantis, Dana, Neapco, ZF and others.

Our focus remains on operational excellence and strategic balance, supporting our traditional powertrain programs while positioning for products, services and technologies that will define the next decade, whether internal combustion, hybrid or electric. The future may not follow a single path, but PTI's diversified capabilities and deep customer relationships give us the agility to succeed under any scenario.

Looking ahead, we know that inflation, higher financing costs, and evolving trade policy will continue to test the industry's resilience. But our culture, the PTI Way has been built precisely for times like these. By staying true to our values, focusing on execution, and embracing innovation where it adds value, we will continue to thrive no matter how the landscape shifts.

Thank you for your continued hard work, professionalism, and dedication. I am proud of what we have achieved together and confident in the road ahead.

With appreciation,
Zack

Bump Caps

Our Belleville employees are embracing safety with style! In this photo, team members proudly show off their brand-new bump caps, all smiles as they model the latest addition to our workplace safety gear. The new headwear not only provides enhanced protection but also brings a fresh, unified look to the team.

Mother's Day!

In a heartwarming gesture for Mother's Day, Tawnya, Belleville's dedicated Human Resource Generalist, brought smiles to the PTI team by planting flowers in coffee mugs and personally handing them out to all the mothers on site. Her thoughtful act added a personal touch to the celebration, showing appreciation for the hardworking moms at PTI and brightening their day with a bit of spring cheer. Thank you, Tawnya, for making Mother's Day extra special!

5 year Anniversary

Five years ago, Mark Putek joined PTI as a temp worker, eager to learn the ropes of our production operations. What started as a temporary role quickly turned into a testament to his remarkable growth and unwavering commitment. Today, as our dedicated 1st shift production team lead, Mark has become a cornerstone of the team—his deep knowledge of our processes ensures smooth, efficient workflows, while his selfless dedication shines through in every shift. Mark's willingness to jump in and help, no matter the task, has inspired everyone around him. From troubleshooting on the floor to mentoring new hires, he embodies the heart of PTI: reliable, proactive, and always putting the team first. We're incredibly grateful for your contributions, Mark—here's to many more years of your positive impact!

News From Jeffersonville

Quarter 2 was full of progress, preparation, and continued investment in our people and our facility. We were proud to send several team members to training programs at Purdue University, further strengthening our technical knowledge and leadership skills. These opportunities support our long-term growth and reinforce our belief in continuous improvement through education. Safety remained a top priority throughout the quarter. We conducted hearing tests across the plant to help protect our employees from long-term noise exposure and ensure compliance with safety standards. These proactive steps are a key part of our ongoing commitment to creating a safe, healthy work environment.

We also celebrated a successful Glossy Paint Launch for Dana Humboldt. This project was a major milestone for our team and a strong example of collaboration across departments. We're now turning our focus to the highly anticipated Dana Gordonsville launch in Quarter 3, and preparations are already underway.

Finally, we've made significant upgrades to our shaft area, improving both efficiency and working conditions. These improvements not only support upcoming launches but also reflect our dedication to long-term plant modernization.

We're proud of what we've accomplished in Q2 and energized for what lies ahead in Q3.

Originally from Africa, Izzy serves as a Production Supervisor at PTI QCS, where he has dedicated over five years of exemplary service. He is highly regarded by his colleagues for his professionalism, dedication, and strong work ethic. Congratulations, Izzy, on this significant milestone.

Chris Sons, representing PTI QCS, was honored to speak at Southern Illinois University, sharing insights on the critical intersection of efficiency and sustainability. His presentation, Efficiency Meets Responsibility – How Lean Drives ESG & Sustainability Efforts, highlighted how lean principles can power meaningful environmental and social impact in the automotive industry. The audience included fellow automotive suppliers and Fortune 500 company representatives, fostering a dynamic discussion on responsible innovation. Chris's message underscored the growing role of operational excellence in shaping a sustainable future.

They undergo firefighting training

On May 18 and 25, PTI personnel participated in a two-part fire safety training program, consisting of a theoretical session on May 18 and a practical session on May 25. This training was conducted as part of our ongoing commitment to workplace safety and emergency preparedness.

The program included new team members as well as a refresher course for those who had completed the training last year. This inclusive approach ensures that all staff are properly equipped to respond effectively in the event of a fire emergency.

This initiative addresses important requirements set by our client and by Mexico's Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS), with the aim of ensuring regulatory compliance and providing peace of mind by meeting all safety standards.

We extend our sincere thanks to all members of the safety brigade for their dedication and commitment. Your participation plays a vital role in maintaining a safe work environment and in being the first line of support during emergency situations.

During the executive visit, strategy and improvements in the paint area were prominently highlighted

During the visit of Mazen Kaloti, Director of Paint Operations in the United States, the PTI Querétaro team showcased the results of their ongoing commitment to aligning strategic objectives across all levels of the organization — from the operational floor to senior management — and most importantly, with our valued customer.

As part of our continuous improvement efforts, we recently welcomed Alejandro Sánchez, Director of Operations at Dana, for a comprehensive tour of our paint operations. During the visit, we presented the progress and enhancements implemented in the process, thanks to the collaborative efforts of our Safety, Quality, and Logistics teams on both sides.

This visit, also attended by Manuel Hernández, Director of Paint Operations in Mexico, was a valuable opportunity to demonstrate how our teams have worked diligently to optimize operations, elevate safety standards, and ensure excellence in quality.

Alejandro Sánchez recognized the positive evolution of the process and stated that he sees no obstacles to continuing a strong collaboration. He emphasized the importance of maintaining a win-win approach, reinforcing the value of working together as true business partners.

Strategic Opportunities Highlighted During Visit to Client's New Plant

Recently, members of our executive team visited the secondary facilities of our client Dana in Monterrey, Nuevo León. The purpose of the visit was to strengthen our collaborative relationship, introduce new growth opportunities, and align our technical capabilities with the expectations of both Dana and the end customer—the OEM.

During the visit, which took place on June 17, the PTI team presented the technical differences between paint pretreatment processes and PTI's scope (Pretreatment Inspection). Special emphasis was placed on distinguishing various coating application methods, as well as the customized solutions we propose to meet—and even exceed—customer requirements.

The visit included a thorough tour of Dana's new and existing facilities. At the new site, we explored opportunities for future integration, while at the current operational area, we observed and assessed assembly processes, material handling, logistics, and product conditions before, during, and after the paint stages.

We truly appreciate Dana's hospitality and openness during the visit, and we look forward to continued success in this strategic partnership.
